Adding Products & Charges

Companies sell products or services to customers. In the subscription economy, services are attached to subscriptions, while products are usually one off services that are charged as a one off cost to the customer. See the example below.

In order to add a product to a customer, the product needs to be created in the Catalog previously. Same happens for Adding Charges. Those need to be created as part of the Catalog, and then added at Customer > Charge level. See below for illustration purposes.
